MDRE Pros SPECIAL REPORT:

How to Find the Right Professional to Help You Get the Home You Desire.

If you are new to the home buying process it can seem a little daunting at first. There are many questions that arise. How does the whole process work? Where is the best neighborhood to buy property? How do I find the professionals I need to help me through the entire process?

People want to know what they should look for in a Realtor and why they should even use a Realtor when looking for home of their own.

First of all, it is easy to find houses all over the internet. So why not just do searches yourself on places like www.Realtor.com?

There are houses there, but with all the people looking for house, the best bargains get snapped up before they even get listed on any internet site.

A good Realtor will pull listings on a daily basis and email them to you so you can look at the property at your convenience and possibly, make an offer when you find a house that fits your specifications.

With each property, you will get detailed information on the number of rooms, square footage, lot size, school district, listing price, neighborhood, etc.

A good Realtor will be able to answer all your questions and spend time driving you around to view properties.

A Realtor can also help you narrow down the search for your house so you do not have to waste your time driving by houses that don't fit the particulars of what you are looking for.

When you are deciding on a Realtor, ask friends, co-workers and other business professionals who they recommend. Interview a handful of different Realtors and ask them specific questions on how they can assist you in the home buying process.

You may want to ask questions like:

- Why should I choose you over any other Realtor?
- How many other clients will you be helping at the same time as me?
- Do you have specific expertise in finding homes for buyers in the neighborhood(s) where I am looking.
- What benefits do I get from using you as my buyer's agent?

Besides helping you find the house you are looking for, a good buyers agent will be instrumental in helping you negotiate a fair purchase price and will be excellent at managing all the details of the closing process.

The real work comes in helping you to negotiate the best offer for the property and then keeping on top of the loan process as well as coordinating the title company, the lender, your insurance company and the seller or seller's Realtor.

Let's look at the process that occurs after the offer is accepted.

Once the offer is accepted, the work really starts and it is important to make sure everything gets processed in the right order.

Keep in mind there are many people that have to work together to finally close on your home.

Besides helping with the negotiating between the seller's agent and/or the seller, a home inspection company has to be hired and scheduled to look at the property.

After the home inspection is complete, any renegotiations need to take place for repairs or adjusting the price for items that were uncovered in the home inspection process.

If after the home inspection, you are ready to move forward on the property. An appraisal has to be ordered and scheduled for the property.

At the same time the loan process needs to be kept in order. The title company needs to be followed up with to make sure that a clear title to the property can be delivered. The Realtor is instrumental in making certain the closing will take place by the date specified.

If you are working a full time job and don't have any real estate experience, the process of buying a home can take a lot of your time, and when problems come up it can cause lots of frustration.

A good Realtor will make your purchase process smooth sailing and you will be in your new home before you know it.

You can look for a Realtor who specializes in helping home buyers in your area. Notice which Realtors have the most property listings in your area. They may only specialize in listing properties for sale, but if they don't work with buyers, they will be able to refer you to an agent that has great experience in homes in your area. Interview many different professionals before making your decision, but find a good Real estate agent and the home buying process will be a lot less painful than going it alone.
